By the title pattern coins are meant such coins as would be called by French numismatists pièces d'essai, that is, trial pieces. Strictly speaking, only those pieces which were designed to be issued from the Royal Mint, and to pass as current money, should be called pattern coins. But the name has been given to several pieces which should properly be classed as medals, or jettons, and also to a few which may have been in circulation. I have, therefore, found it difficult to draw the line between medals and pattern coins on the one hand, and between patterns and current coins on the other. In deference, however, to the suggestions of correspondents, I have admitted into this list several pieces which I do not believe can be fairly classed as patterns.

It has not been my object to write a treatise on pattern coins, but merely to draw up a list giving the value of the different varieties. In such a list many lesser distinctions, which ought to be noticed in a complete treatise, have unavoidably been passed over; but the description will, it is hoped, be found sufficient to enable the collector to identify, and form an estimate of the value of, most of the specimens that come under his notice.

It is scarcely necessary to add another warning against the many false coins now rejected from most cabinets.

Forgeries of the Anne farthings, of various types, both in silver and copper, are often met with. These are generally cast; but there are a good many re-strikes of several of the later patterns. Fullerton money seems to be getting more plentiful, and patterns by Droz and Wiener are not so scarce as might have been expected.

On pages 59 and 60 of this book will be found notes of a few prices realised in November and December of this year.

Many of the prices quoted in this list are high, if not fancy, prices; but it must be borne in mind that some of the coins are unique. In fact, although several catalogues have been searched for some of the scarcer varieties, only a single quotation has been discovered. The number of references for each specimen will therefore, in some cases, afford a slight indication whether it be comparatively common or scarce. The prices given refer chiefly to specimens in the finest state, although, it need scarcely be said, the catalogues are not always a safe guide as to the condition of coins offered for sale.

The collections are referred to by name, and the year when each was dispersed is added in brackets. This will allow those who are so disposed to verify the quotations at any time, and will ensure the correction of any errors that may have crept into the list; but no pains have been spared to make it as accurate as possible. I am much indebted to Mr. R. A. Hoblyn, who kindly revised the proof sheets, and also to the late Colonel W. Stewart Thorburn and Mr. Verity, for many valuable suggestions.

EXETER HALF-CROWN.—(Ruding, XXV. 1.) There is a very beautiful and rare half-crown of Charles I., of the Exeter mint, on which the king appears mounted on horseback, with his face turned nearly to the front, and holding a truncheon in his right hand. The horse is prancing amidst arms strewn on the ground. On the Rev. is an oval shield, garnished, and the date (1642), in small figures, may be noticed in the lower garniture of it. The m.m. on both sides is a rose. Hawkins ("Silver Coins," p. 325) says: "This piece is round, neatly executed, generally in very good preservation, and probably not adopted for circulation." There was no half-crown of this type in the Shepherd collection, recently dispersed. The coin is much prized, and specimens have realised the following prices at sales:

Dimsdale (1824), £18 10s.; Durrant (1847), £13; Cuff (1854), £8 2s. 6d.; Dymock (1858), £6; Murchison (1864), £7 12s. 6d.; Bergne (1873), £22 10s.; Young (1881), £32.

Droz is very graceful. To ensure the agreement of his work with the rules of anatomy, Droz first engraved a nude figure, and afterwards added the drapery. There is a rather uncommon pattern, struck from the dies by Droz, in illustration of the principle on which he worked: this piece bears on one side the nude, and on the other the draped, figure. All the halfpennies with the nude reverse were struck by Mr. Taylor. This is one of the dies which had not been hardened when it came into his possession, and it is also one of the dies which has now been destroyed.

Amongst some old iron, which had been the property of Mr. Boulton, of the Soho Mint, and which was purchased by Mr. Taylor, were found several dies for halfpennies by Droz, and other patterns. A few of these dies had never been used, nor even hardened. Mr. Taylor caused them to be hardened, and, after striking several specimens from them, some of the dies were intentionally defaced. But it is not generally known how many specimens of each variety were struck; nor has it been proved that all the dies were defaced.
